PRODUCTS

As a family interested in history and preservation, we visited many parks and historic sites. Too often we were confronted by signs that showed their age, had been deliberately damaged, and were hard to read. We heard too often from friends and colleagues that outdoor interpretive signs were too expensive and too easily vandalized to be worth the trouble to develop and install. We thought there had to be a better way, so we designed a sign that would be more vandal- and UV-resistant.

Signs

We designed our signs to stand up against the elements. UV resistant and waterproof, they last and last. The picture on the left is of a sign at Spring Hill, Tennessee, taken in 1998. The picture on the right was taken of the same sign in 2005. If you prefer a traditional sign system, see our page of alternative sign systems.

Posters

Great for resale, our historical poster series was begun at the request of South Mountain Battlefield staff after the public saw our signs in the park. We can develop one for your site, too. We are planning a gallery series using original art, historic maps, photographs, and drawings.
